Officials Cite Long-term Need for U.S. in Iraq

By DAVID E. SANGER

The two top American military and diplomatic officials in Iraq were unable to argue that the heightened troop levels had made more than fragile and transitory progress.

"Camino is an open source web browser developed with a focus on providing the best possible experience for Mac OS X users."

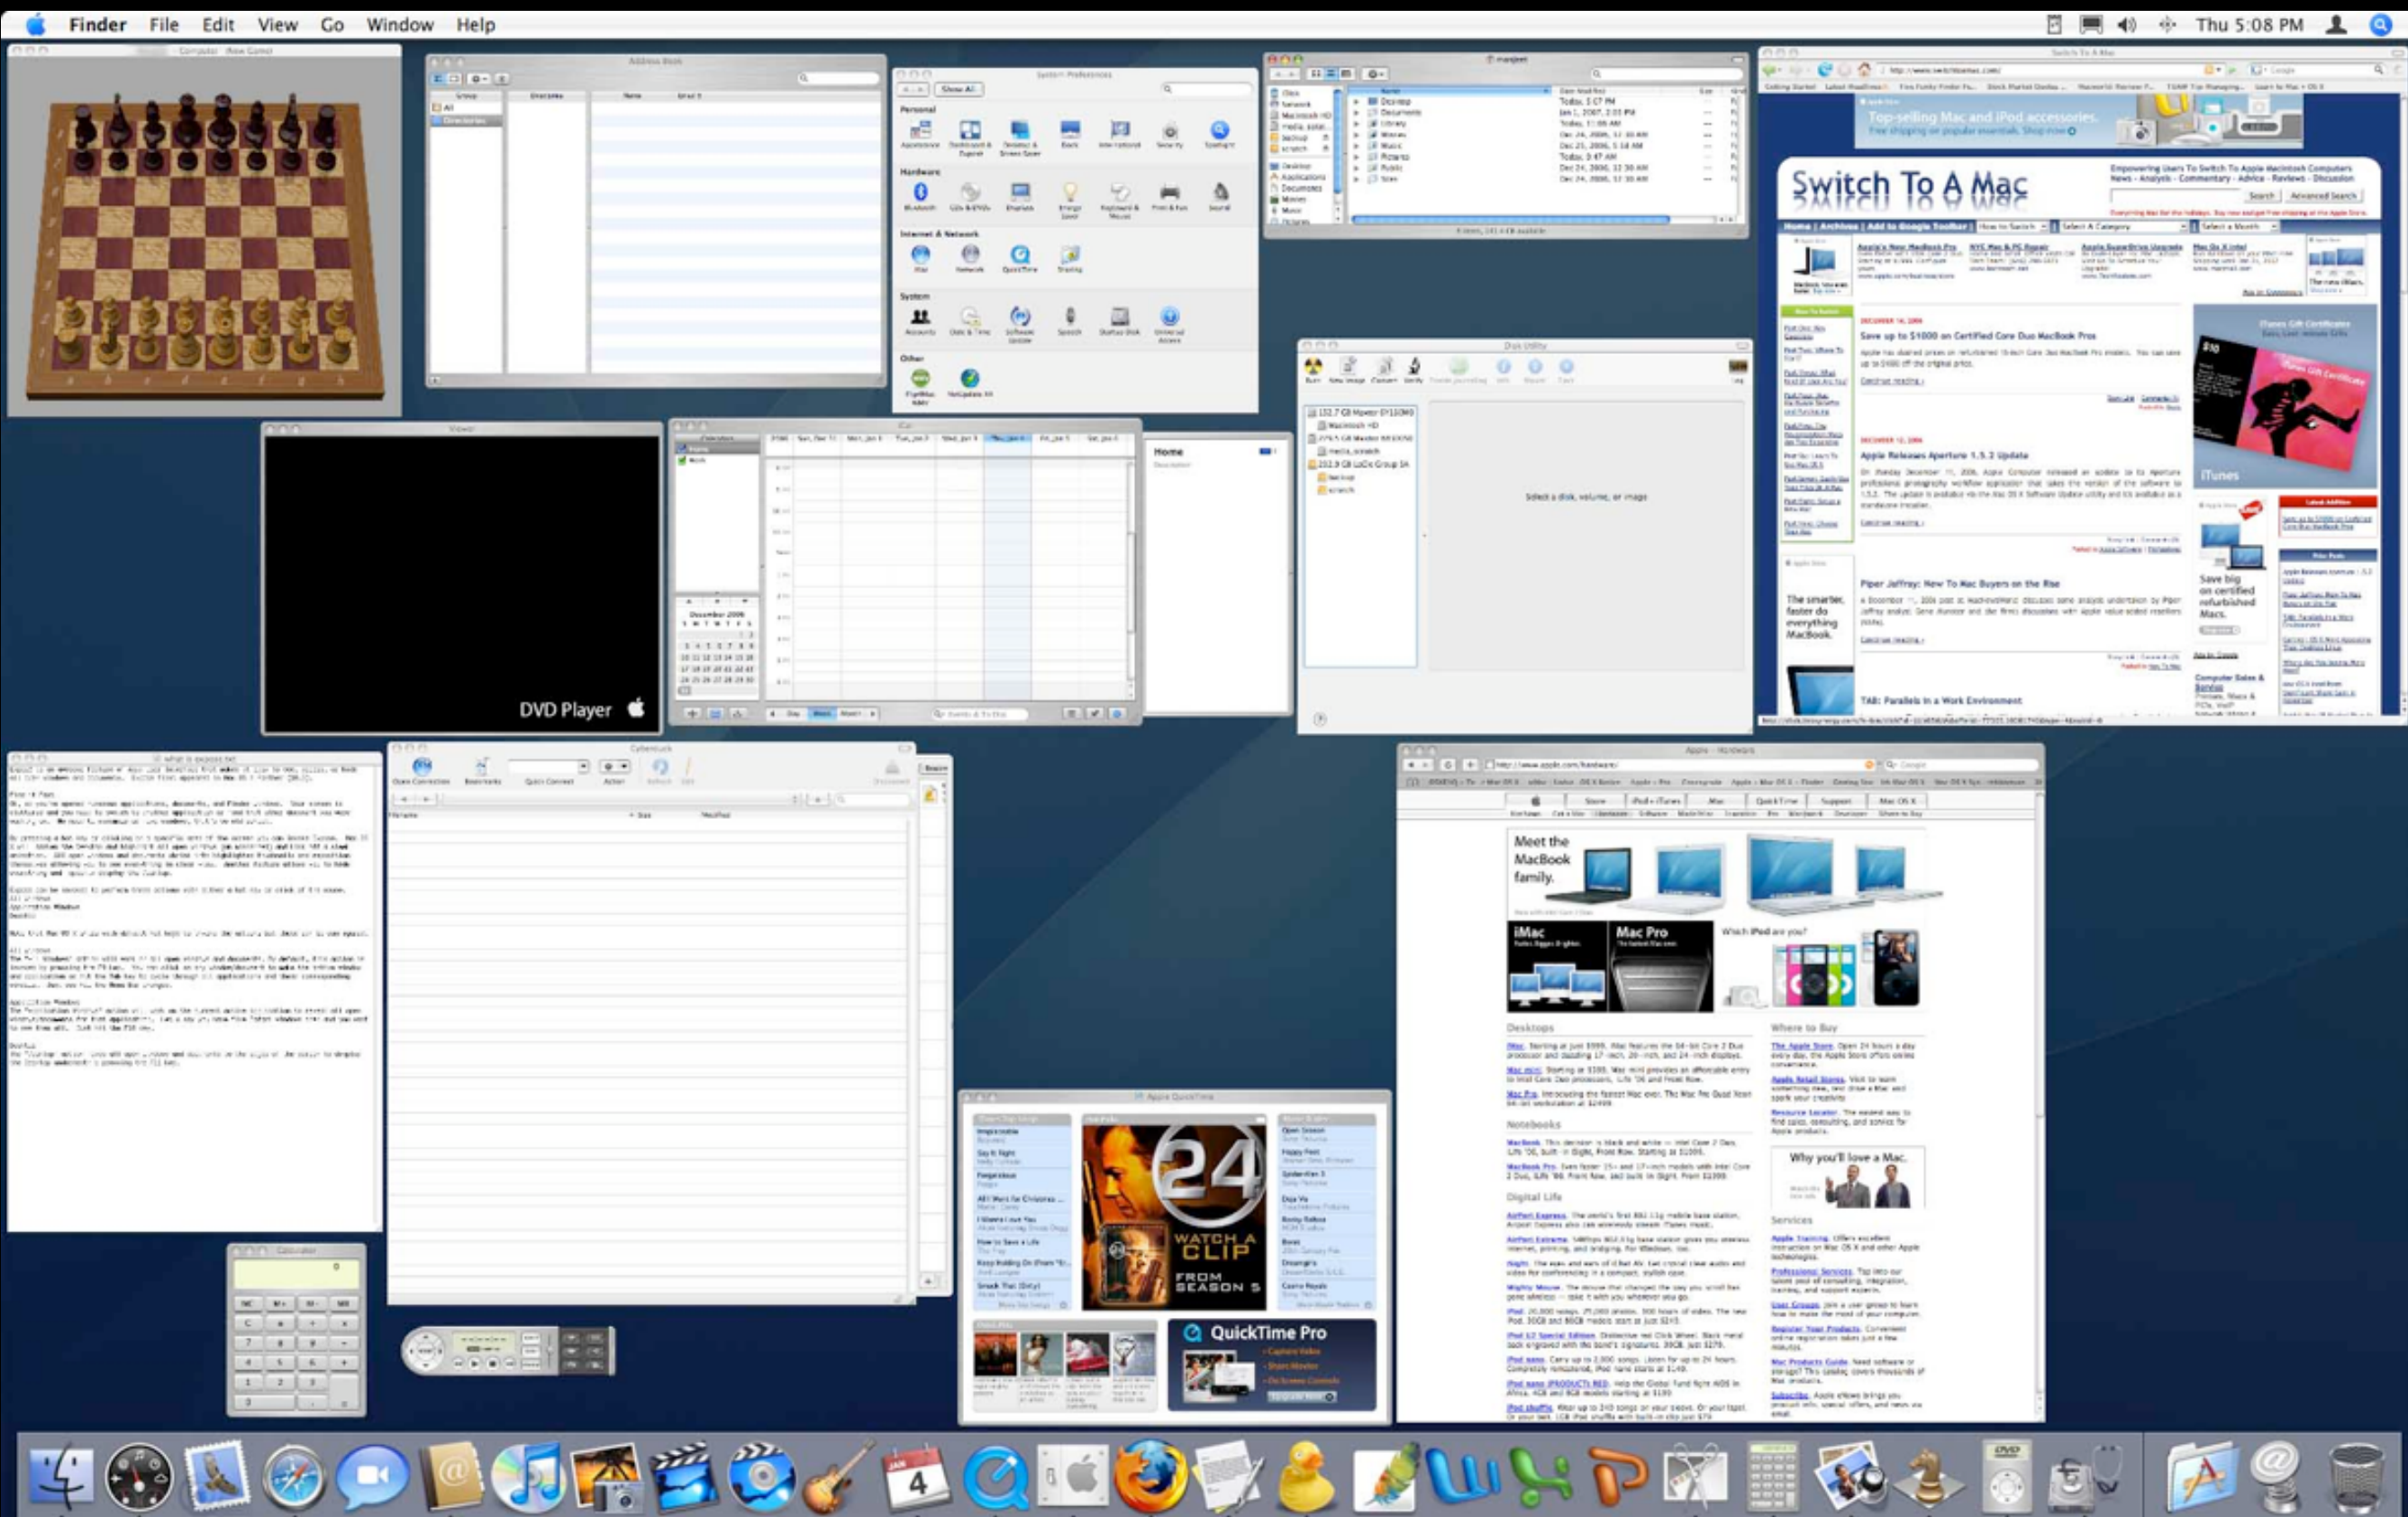

- We're not a general purpose internet utility (i.e., an RSS reader, email client, news reader, etc.).
- We're not a complex application requiring documentation to understand.
- We're not Steve Jobs' browser
- We're not a development platform
- We're not everything to everyone (not simply Firefox with Cocoa controls)

“I will add functionality and eye candy to Camino by implementing Tabsposé. Tabsposé will make it easier to switch between tabs and see all the sites you currently have open.

At WWDC '06 Bertrand Serlet, Vice President of Software Engineering at Apple stated that at first, software needed function, then ease of use, and now needs a “wow factor.” Tabsposé will be the feature that adds the “wow factor” to Camino.”
